

RE: Cover Letter

Dear Hiring Manager,

I am a motivated individual who has been lucky with my career, being in many demanding and challenging positions. I enjoy working on apps which have meaning and help people. I have a firm grasp of the entire software development lifecycle. I have worked on numerous apps from concept to app store submission. I have also worked on several apps in a support and enhancement role.

I'm at a stage now where I'm looking to settle down again with a good company, with great employees, and a great product. The product and work environment mean the most in my decision making.

I never let an employer down. I always produce great results. No challenge is too big. I have a long history of many diverse projects and happy employers. I'm also a firm believer in structure, code maintainability, and doing it right the first time versus shortcuts and/or quick-and-dirty paths.

"I have much experience and a solid background, yet there are many things still to learn. As a class valedictorian, I learn new things very quickly, and am able to apply my background of quality programming to new environments. I am eager to continue to grow and learn as well as mentor those around me. I am very reliable, a solid team member, and a strong independent producer."
